INDIVIDUAL CITIZEN OWES OBLIGATIONS

THE REV. JOSEPH A. COOPER TELLS GRADUATES.

CITIZENSHIP BIGGEST

"America Needs New Consecration To Common Ideal," He Says—"Girl Orator" Speaks At Banquet.

A call to greater citizenship in a greater America was sounded last night by the Rev. Joseph A. Cooper in his address on "The Common Task" to the graduates of the Maryville and St. Patrick's high schools, at the banquet held in Residence Hall by the Maryville Chamber of Commerce.

America needs a new consecration to a common ideal, the Rev. Cooper told the graduates. It is highly proper, he said, to have a rebirth of Americanism—one tongue, one country.

"We in America lack on common background; a common understanding," Mr. Cooper began. "But there has suddenly come about in America a realization that we must save somehow the American spirit. We have a feeling now that we must protect certain ideals what we term American."

The speaker cited the present Japanese exclusion measure now awaiting Presidential action. Mr. Coolidge wants an extension of time on the effective date but the Senate has refused to accede to his wishes.

The common task for everyone today is American citizenship, Mr. Cooper told his audience. This rests first upon the consciousness of the individual citizen of his citizenship, the speaker said, and then he appealed for more active participation of Americans in the American government.

"Government officials are simply the representatives of you and me," the speaker continued, "and it is their duty to do as we wish them to do, not as they themselves, want to do.

Our present disturbances in Washington are the result of officials not heeding to the expressed wishes of the American citizens."

We should magnify in America the common virtue of the citizens of this country, Mr. Cooper continued. Individual talent has been magnified too much throughout the country, he added. We have too often talked about the Edisons, the Fords and the Rockefellers, and neglected the man in the factory, on the farm, or at the desk, he said.

"We in America must magnify the common, everyday virtues of honesty, integrity, honor and justice," Mr. Cooper told the graduates. During the war, the American ideal was at its peak but since then there has been a general let-down all over the country, he said.

"Citizenship must rest upon common virtues. I do not know what the future of America is going to be, but I do not hold any false optimism, but the young people of the present day, who have been given far greater opportunities than any other generation, should make a greater America.

"You young people come into the common task, bringing your sense of fair play, your energy, your honor. This common task is big enough to take the rest of your life—the task of making your bit in the contribution of citizenship to this, the greatest land of all," Mr. Cooper concluded.

Miss Edwyna Forsyth, "girl orator," was present last night and given a big ovation by the audience. Miss Forsyth gave her oration, "Lincoln and the Constitution," which is printed elsewhere in today's Democrat-Forum.

Special music was furnished last night by Marvin Westfall, William Gaugh and Kathryn Gray of the Maryvill High School, and the graduates of the St. Patrick's High School.

L. M. Eek, president of the Chamber of Commerce, presided.

Will Be Sold on Streets of Maryville May 24, by Members of Women's Auxiliary of Post.

A shipment of 1,000 "buddy" poppies was received by the Seth Ray David post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, this morning.

These poppies will be sold on the streets of Maryville on Saturday, May 24, by the women's auxiliary of the post, for the benefit of former service men in veterans' hospitals throughout the United States. The money from the sale of the poppies will go for the care and entertainment of these men. The "buddy" poppies were made by the veterans in these hospitals.

Governor Hyde, in a recent proclamation, called upon the people of Missouri to purchase these "buddy" poppies and aid the disabled soldiers confined in the hospitals.

MINISTRY OFFERS CHANCE TO SERVE

DEALS WITH MOTIVES

* * * * * * * * *

"The Christian ministry appeals as the supreme opportunity to invest one's life in the ages and in the lives of men," says the Rev. S. P. Allison in an article today presenting the field of the ministry to the graduates of high schools and colleges.

This is the fifth of the special series of articles being published by the Democrat-Forum in order to aid the high school and college graduates in the selection of a profession.

Article dealing with teaching, Medicine, merchandising, and law have already been published. These articles are especially timely for all those students undecided as to the profession to choose.

The following is what Mr. Allison has to say about the ministry:

* * * * * * * * * * *

The Christian minister of today is far different from the type so often presented in the movies and comics. Put a dozen of the outstanding ministers of our country in the lobby of a big hotel and it would be difficult to pick them out from among the business and professional men there. The things which might enable one to pick the ministers would be the marks in face and bearing which distinguish all men and women who live truly, think nobly and keep close fellowship with God.

The theological seminaries are more and more largely filled with the pick of our colleges. In the seminary generation of the writer there were, among others, an All-American football tackle, a champion high jumper from the Pacific Coast who could clear 6 feet 3 inches. College letters for all sports abounded. The seminary had basketball, soccer, tennis and other teams which would easily dispose of more than the average of college teams. Debators, orators, leading fraternity men are coming from college to seminary to prepare for the ministry. If any one has the idea that a minister must exchange joy for long-faced seriousness, a long-tailed coat and a white tie, and the fellowship of men who are in the ministry because they could not do anything else, he should attend an alumni banquet of some leading seminary. The alumni banquet of McCormick Theological Seminary this Spring, had more pep and vociferousness than many a college reunion.

What are some of the things which are more and more attracting the pick of American youth to the ministry?

The Christian ministry appeals as the supreme opportunity to invest one's life in the ages and in the lives of men. Men have always wanted to know about God. Men have always blundered about, perplexed by the many confusing, alluring voices of life, groping for the supreme investment of life. The minister has one of his key messages the words of Jesus, "Lift up your eyes." He lifts the eyes of men from the monotony and rou-

DELEGATES HAVE NO TIME TO LOAF

AT CONFERENCE, SAYS DR. C. C. JAMES.

WOMEN ARE NOT GIVEN

Annual Conference Membership — For Historic Value the East Is Worthwhile, Is Doctor's Opinion.

To Democrat-Forum.

Well, the machine is organized and at work, and it works all the time, so that we have no time to loaf. I assume that we who are here, are not surprised at that fact.

The morning devotions conducted by the bishops cause the tide of our thinking along spiritual thing to rise, like the water in the well, in that beautiful story by Van Dyke, "The Source." It is beginning the day with God, when you take into consideration the problems we are trying to work out, we need to keep close to God.

Yesterday and today they debated the question of ordination of women as ministers. When the report of the commission came in, an attempt was made to amend it so as to give annual conference membership, but the amendment was lost. Then the vote on the original motion was taken, and we have a new law on our books, that women may be ordained as local preachers, but were not given annual conference membership.

During the morning session, Bishop Fisher's father and mother being present, they were introduced to the General Conference, and then Bishop Fisher came and putting him arm about his mother, said that his mother said, when told about the introduction, "Why Ted you know I can't speak," "Well," said Bishop Fisher, "I told her I would speak for her." So he said that "My mother told me before I was born and prayed the Lord I would be a preacher, and that she knew as soon as I opened my mouth, the Lord had answered her prayer." It was truly a beautiful picture to see his mother, a little old lady with her big son's arms about her. I am sure she was very proud of her boy, and the father seemed as proud as she was of her son.

In the work of our conference the rule is that a person shall arise and address the chair, giving his name, and the name of the conference he represents, and when recognized, he must come to the platform and speak. There is a brother here who is always rising to speak either on a question of privilege or a point of order, and on this occasion he was attempting to speak from his place on the floor. The bishop said to him: "Brother, you must come to the platform according to the rules." The irony of the thing was in the fact that he is always calling attention to the rules of order, and trying to keep every one in order, and yet he was failing to keep the rules himself.

I saw a peculiar scene, such as I have not seen for some time. An Italian with an organ, and a monkey, and a crowd of children. I could not tell which was happiest, the children or the monkey. But in all candor I could not see any resemblance between the monkey and the children. Hence, evolution must be a failure, especially the monkey brand.

There is a historic or Memorial Bridge here across the Connecticut river, that has a bronze plate on each tower telling some historic event. It is a pretty piece of work.

The Springfield Armory is located here, where the rifles of that name are made. After the world war some 2,000,000 rifles were returned to this place.

I passed the first Land Bank building I have seen. It is to do the work for eight states, and is a very nice building. There stands on State Street a statue of the Pilgrim Father. Every line of it speaks of power. As well as beauty. You could see courage written all over his face. What a legacy they left to humanity. For historic value the East is worthwhile. So many points of interest to see. I went up to the top of the Campanile of the Auditorium group. The scenery from up there was pretty. You could see the Connecticut river as it wound its singing way around the city. Passing near to Mt. Tom, I had a field glass and with it, we brought what was far away, close by. In the top of the Campanile is a chime of bells. Tunes are played on them. Since we have been here the old Methodist hymns have been played on them.

For fear of wearying you, I will stop.

C. C. JAMES.

C. A. Hawkins Writes Eulogy To Memory Cleo Dow Cook

The following tribute to the memory of Cleo Dow Cook was written by C. A. Hawkins of the State Teachers College:

DOW COOK

It is not within my power, nor do I intend to offer in this message consolation to those who mourn for Dow Cook. Their greatest comfort must always be in the recollection of the sacrifices they have made and the kindnesses they have bestowed, and of services generously and graciously rendered. But if I could make my words quiver with sympathy and tenderness, I would do it.

Nor is this intended for a eulogy upon one who now needs no eulogy,—who never needed such to make his life what it was. It is meant solely to hold before you a little longer the supreme quality of temperateness, which this young man exemplified in his life.

This is a restless and impatient age. We fret, we hurry, and we let our little concerns gouge great furrows in our faces, and fix hard and ineffaceable lines there. The weather spoils our plans, and we are worried. Our ambitious projects are not realized, and we become bitter. Little things, of little consequence in their realization, move us to intemperate action. Disappointment overwhelms us, and we despond and look without hope to the future.

But this boy wanted everything in life that makes a strong appeal to boys of his age. He could not run on the race course. He could not compete with his fellows, generally. He could not climb the hills, nor take the exhilerating plunge in the running water. He could not plan for a career in life. However, alluring, he could not hope for a home, builded by his own hands, as a monument to his efforts. All he could do was to lie in bed and watch the stream of life flow by. He could, indeed, work with his fingers, and this he did; and in many homes today are the mute evidence of his handiwork. He could watch and study bird life, and insect life, and all natural phenomens as they exhibited themselves around his door; and this he also did. He could read, and did read everything in great variety that made its appeal to him. He could think upon what he had read and heard and seen, and so evolve from the jumble of knowledge he had gained an organized body of information unusual to one of his age. And he did all these with a composure which should teach us, to whom fortune has been kinder, better to evaluate the things of life, and to practice more effectually his temperateness.

He seemed to baffle death by the clamness with which he met it. When he left the body, he left all the evidence of a tranquil spirit in his face. One knew what his life had been from those serene features. The words inevitably and befittingly came, "O Death, where is thy sting! O Grave, where is thy victory!"

So will you not allow me to invite you to think a little longer upon the manner of life of this noble lad?

SENATE SUSTAINS PRESIDENT'S VETO

THE BURSUM PENSION BILL IS DEFEATED.

ONLY ONE VOTE SHY

Rigid Immigration Bill May Be Passed Latter Part of Week—Asks Commission Survey.

Washington, May 13.—By the narrow margain of a single vote—and that secured by a senator changing his vote at the last minute—the Senate today sustained President Coolidge's veto on the Bursum pension bill which would have given considerable increased pensions to the veterans of the Mexican, Civil and Spanish-American wars.

The vote was 43 to 28, after Senator Herreld, Republican of Oklahoma, who originally had voted to override the President's veto, corrected his vote to sustain the veto. Herreid's vote, as cast originally, would have made the ballot read so as to give the two-thirds majority necessary to override a presidential veto. The vote was taken amid great disorder.

Washington, May 13.—The immigration bill, with its provision for Japanese exclusion effective July 1, will be passed by the House Thursday, and by the Senate probably Friday, as a result of agreements reached today.

While the President, at the suggestion of Secretary Hughes, sought to delay the effective date until March 1, 1925, but was defeated by Congress, is not expected to result in a veto of the bill. The President has been quoted in favor of exclusion and Congress is unshaken in its demands.

Washington, May 13.—Three Republican Senators who favor the Mellon plan of tax reduction were appointed by the President of the Senate today to the conference committee which will endeavor to work out a tax revision bill with the House that is acceptable to President Coolidge.

Those named were Smoot of Utah, McLean of Connecticut, and Curtis of Kansas. Their Democratic colleagues who are opposed to the Mellon plan, are Simmons of North Carolina, who drafted the successful Democratic bill, and Jones of New Mexico.

Washington, May 13.—The Interstate Commerce Commission was directed to make a complete survey of the transportation rat structure with a view to lowering freight rates, in a resolution favorably reported today from the House interstate and foreign commerce committee.

Mrs. W. L. Rhodes went to Ravenwood this morning to spend the week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ellsworth.

POINCARE'S DEFEAT OPENS BETTER WAY

PREMIER AND CABINET WILL RETIRE JUNE 1.

SATISFACTION IN U. S.

And There Is Little Regret in Great Britain—New Policy May Be More Elastic.

Paris, May 13.—Premier Raymond Poincare, following a cabinet meeting, officially notified President Millerand today that he and his cabinet will resign June 1, as a result of the defeat of the bloc Nationalist Party in Sunday's general election.

It is first understood the letter of resignation had been placed in the president's hands this morning, but an official communication later corrected this report.

Supporters of the Premier, explaining the delay over the government's resignation, pointed out that constitutionally the new chamber is not existent until June 1.

Washington, May 13. — While it would neither be polite nor diplomatic to say so publicly, it is a scarcely disguised fact that officials of the American government contemplate the fall of the Poincare ministry in France with considerable satisfaction.

Poincare, with his repeatedly stern policies on reparations, armaments, French securities, and inter-Allied war debts, hav clashed frequently and violently with American policies, and his impending retirement was frankly looked upon today as clearing away some of the major obstacles in the pathway of international accord.

London, May 13.—Premier Poincare's fall aroused little regret in Great Britain today.

The concensus of opinion is that the retirement of Poincare will mean better relations between France and England and will make it easier to arrive at an agreement on reparations.

Poincare has snubbed the British so often that it is not expected any sorrow will be felt in official circles over his passing.

It is anticipated that the new policy toward England will be much more elastic.

Miss Forsyth's Oration on "Lincoln and The Constitution"

The oration of Miss Edwyna Forsyth on "Lincoln and the Constitution," which was given in the Kansas City Star oratorical contest Saturday night and which was again rendered by Miss Forsyth at the Chamber of Commerce banquet last evening, is as follows:

In the heart of every true, patriotic, American citizen is a word emblazoned with letters of fire, a word for which any one of us would gladly sacrifice our lives that it might live on forever, a word that offers to each of us liberty, protection, freedom and love, a word revered and respected by all peoples, a word which stands for a nation willing to thank God for all that it is or has—the most wonderful word, the most wonderful nation in the world—America!

But does America deserve this love of ours? Is she worthy of the sacrifice even of life that she may live? The answer has come to us through the ages from that period of darkness which marks her birth. "In order to form a more perfect union; in order to establish justice, in order to insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, and promote the general welfare, in order to secure the blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity"—in order to give this heritage to us, her citizens, a constitution was established.

This is the American Creed, the ideal back of the American Constitution of which Gladstone, the greatest of English statesmen said, "The American Constitution is the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man."

Yes, America is worthy of all that we can give and more, because of the ideal for which she stands.

The first period of darkness and storm came and passed, leaving in its place a people united by hardships and bound together by an ideal expressed in a constitution. Its people came to America in search of freedom and they remained as citizens of a nation built upon that freedom, a nation which had passed through its first crisis into a period of peace and progress.

In the midst of this peace and progress, a sectional feeling began to grow, which gradually undermined the feeling of union and thereby endangered the constitution. There was no real union, then, between the North and South; no two nations could have entertained more bitter rancor toward each other than these two parts of our nation. In effect we became a dual nation without a common loyalty between the two parts. Neither understood the other or was willing to sacrifice her ideals in order to reach a reconciliation. Each had a social ideal so deep that not even a theory of government could temper it, and it was to uphold these ideals in which they so whole-heartedly believed that they willingly gave their lives.

The long delayed crisis had come—could the constitution stand through civil war or must it fall and give rise to two nations instead of one? In every crisis there must be a leader—a leader with vision enough to plan for the end even though the crisis may have just begun. A leader arose during this crisis whose vision led the nation through its time of testing. This leader was Abraham Lincoln. His appearance was a symbol of those hardworkers, the children of the soil, from whom he sprang. Huge, awkward, ungainly, he was; yet there was a suggestion of power in his face and figure, which was rather strangely softened by the loving expression in his eyes. Behind all his gentleness, his slowness, his sadness, there appeared an inflexible purpose which held him strong and unwavering as fate. He was not an idealist, sacrificing realities to abstractions; on the contrary the right which he saw was always a practical right—a right which could not be compassed. His actions show not so much a divine inspiration, but rather an honesty of purpose, strong commonsense, clear reasoning powers and a singular sagacity in reading the public mind. It was not a brilliant mind that was neeeded but a masterful mind—and this Lincoln had. From the beginning he had bound himself fast to a great moral purpose, which became united with the preservation of our national life and the constitution, which was the law governing that national life. With a devotion to the constitution that we cannot help but admire, he led through countless difficulties to victory for that constitution.

Four years of bloodshed had passed. The South lay crippled and bleeding from the struggle. She needed a friend for the untold hardships that must follow war. That friend was Abraham Lincoln. "Enough lives have already been sacrificed; we must extinguish our resentments if we expect harmony and union," was the message Lincoln gave to his cabinet at its last meeting. He was already at work to see how easy he could make the period of reconstruction for the South. The famous words of his second inaugural address show his feeling toward the South: "With malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow, and his orphans,—to do all which may achieve a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."

While he was thus preparing himself to defend the stricken South, his enemies were plotting against him. John Wilkes Booth, who thought himself a re-incarnation of the Roman Brutus, shot him, and the great friend of the South was gone. Jefferson Davis said in his tribute to Lincoln, "Next to the destruction of the Confederacy—the death of Lincoln was the darkest day the South has known."

But, if his plans for the South had failed, the constitution was saved. He had not lived in vain, for the great purpose of his life was fulfilled. The crisis had passed and the nation was safe.

It was Lincoln's business to save the Union and its Supreme Law. Whatever he thought it was necessary to do to save the constitution, he did; what it was well to leave undone he would forbear. He was commanded to enforce the laws of the United States by the fundamental law and he did it by whatever force he considered necessary. He did not hesitate to appeal to the sword when he became satisfied that in no other way could the Union be saved. He warred for the Union and when he warred, he warred in earnest, for it is a sign of weakness to be half-hearted when blows must be struck. He longed above everything for the day when the parts of our nation should once more be knit together in the unbreakable bonds of eternal friendship. And this is the secret of Lincoln's contribution to the constitution.

Tse sectional feeling has passed and we are again one nation. Many severe problems are before us. Some of these exist in great intensity in one part of the country; others, in another. But in the end, all of them will be solved, for the fundamental law of our land stood supreme in its hour of trial. It has met and solved our problems of the past; it is solving those of the present; it is great enough to meet the needs of the future. Only by the loyalty, respect, and love, of every citizen, can we be worthy of this Supreme Law, built upon the unchanging creed that "righteousness exalteth a nation." Each one of us should feel in the words of the poet:

"Our father's God! from out whose hand
The centuries fall like grains of sand;
We meet today united, free
And loyal to our land and Thee."

G. Smith to Lead the Bearcat Track Team Next Year

The captain-elect is a fast dash man, having won his letter last year, and also being a member of the Spoofhound track team for the four years he was in Maryville High School, and one year was the Spoofhound captain. Smith runs the 440-yard dash and the 120 high hurdles and is a member of the mile relay team. He ran the 440-yard dash in the medley relay race at the Drake Carnivals this spring when the Bearcats took first in this race in the exceptional fast time of 7 minutes 40 2-5 seconds. While in High School Smith set a record in the half-mile at Albany that has stood.

The captain-elect confines his athletic prowess to the cinder path only but here he is one of Coach Lawrence's reliables and at the M. I. I. A. meet at Springfield Friday the other 440 men in the conference have a man to fear.

The True Story of Woodrow Wilson

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

CHAPTER XIX

How Tumulty Came to be Selected As Private Secretary—His influence On The Administration

Woodrow Wilson was aided in no small extent in what he accomplished in his first administration by the astuteness of his private secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty, and the constant counsel of Colonel House and Albert Sidney Burleson, Postmaster General, who had for many years been a member of the House of Representatives.

Naturally the judgments of these advisers became the source of much debate among President Wilson's friends as would be natural in political matters. For every time that one man is selected the friends of the disappointed candidates are loud in their expressions of criticism. It has always been the view-point of politicians themselves that more enemies than friends are made by appointments to office.

Lack of contact with Washington itself—Mr. Wilson had studied Congress only in a theoretical sense—made the first few years a perilous proposition for President Wilson. He was not a mixer. He was never known to slap anyone on the back in jovial fashion. He was sociable enough upon occasions, good-humored and a fascinating conversationalist, but he did not know how to inspire the practical politicians with that species of support which means working tooth and nail and with unflinching loyalty.

Impressions may differ, jealousies are always present in the immediate circle of a President's daily life, but the success of Woodrow Wilson's first administration may be attributed in no small measure to the warmth, enthusiasm and political sagacity of his private secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty.

No one in recent years had been the private secretary of the Tumulty type. He was unique. He was neither the Machiavelli that so many of his enemies thought him to be nor did he exert the influence over Mr. Wilson which so many inaccurate accounts of their friendship would seem to indicate.

President Wilson listened to Tumulty, read his memoranda and took his advice on so many important matters that in the inner circle those who were dismayed by Tumulty's growing influence sought to check it—and eventually did.

Mr. Wilson, as Governor-elect of New Jersey, did not select Tumulty to be his private secretary because of a desire to have at his elbow a man of his own temperament but because he knew he needed someone with the qualities he himself lacked. Tumulty knew New Jersey politics, he was a progressive in the State legislature and a conscientious worker. He was moreover frank. He was one of the few men who could stand before Woodrow Wilson and tell him in plain langnage wherein he was making a mistake. Most of the other advisers Mr. Wilson had were afraid of him—rather than incur his disfavors they would couch their dissent in euphemistic phrases.

Certain influences were working in 1912 to bring about the selection of someone other that Tumulty to be private secretary to the President. It was not due to any lack of confidence in Tumulty but to a belief that someone who had experience in larger affairs might be more of a help to Mr. Wilson. There was a time when the name of Newton D. Baker was given serious consideration for the post of private secretary. He was at that time mayor of Cleveland and had made a very favorable impression during the 1912 campaign.

Curiously enough the opposition to Tumulty was one of the things which crystallized Mr. Wilson's determination to appoint him. Mr. Wilson retained the office of Governor of New Jersey while he was President elect and made his home in Princeton, commuting every morning the twelve miles between his home and his office. The author rode with him many mornings and discussed various questions relating to the news of the day. On one occasion when we had been riding along in silence for several minutes Mr. Wilson suddenly said—"You would be surprised to know the number of letters I have been receiving telling me I must not appoint a Catholic to be my private secretary." His jaw set, his eyes flashed. "I would like to ram that appointment down their throats" he added.

Newspapers began to predict that Tumulty would be selected but he never had the slightest information to that effect until about two weeks before the inauguration when Governor Wilson called him into his office one day and offered him the Secretaryship.

There was in those days a good deal of skepticism as to how Mr. Wilson would fare with the political strategists in Congress. One day he read an editorial in a New York newspaper expressing the fear that because he had been a school teacher he would not be able to cope with the wise politicians at Washington.

"Of course," said Mr. Wilson, "I can not answer this and say 'don't worry, I can take care of myself.' Nobody would believe it for I will have to prove my knowledge of politics and politicians as time passes but whenever I see anything of this kind in print I can't help but think that, compared with some of the college politicians, the party politicians are amateurs. The party politician plays his hand openly. You always know what he is going to do. He always follows the same rules and is always up to the same purpose. A college politician should not be mentioned in the same breath. He is very shrewd—and you never know what he is going to do. He has the gift of speech and can make black look like white—and I have been dealing with him for the past thirty years.

"When I was acandidate for Governor of New Jersey, the opposition called me a schoolmaster in derision. I told them the definition of the word was a man trained to find out things and tell them to others as effectively as possible. I said that was what I was doing about New Jersey affairs, and that I proposed to continue finding out things and telling people about them as long as I lived."

It was Mr. Wilson's chief weapon—the power of public opinion. No one was more adept in its use, however, than Secretary Tumulty. He was able to set the stage for an address by the President for the announcement of some other important action, hinting a few days in advance that a sensation was forthcoming or revealing bit by bit, and with an air of mystery, things which appeared to the eager newspapermen to be great secrets, data which Mr. Tumulty with all the arts known to the practiced publicity expert, divulged with an idea to headlines and conspicuous display.

Woodrow Wilson little knew how the artful Tumulty did handle the delicate question of relations with the press, but the effectiveness of the Tumulty policy was as a rule conceded. Time and again Secretary Tumulty revealed the President's views and articulated the administration viewpoint with more skill than the President showed in his conferences with the newspaper men. Nobody in the entire administration kept in as close touch in the eight years with the editorial opinion of the American press than did Secretary Tumulty. He watched the upward and downward curve of the administration popularity with all the concentration that a banker studies the rise and fall of the investment markets. Secretary Tumulty possessed an intuition which is invaluable in the realm of politics. And with it he brought to Mr. Wilson a keen judgement of men and political influence. Mr. Wilson never knew of the many bits of tactful conversation conducted in his outer office which sent Senators and Representatives back to the capitol in a different frame of mind than they came to the White House. Hostilities were overcome, grievances were smoothed out and contacts strengthened all because of the liaison maintained by Secretary Tumulty. Naturally he had his opponents. No politician ever took a step in one direction without antagonizing some one on the opposite side. President Wilson's confidence in Tumulty in the earlier years was unbounded. He gave him a free hand. Secretary Tumulty on the other hand stimulated by his successes in handling the President and callers generally took the responsibility for many steps which possibly the President might not have taken had he been consulted, but just as often was Secretary Tumulty right in these plunges as was his chief wrong.

Time and again Secretary Tumulty intervened and prevented political blunders. And the breaks of the game, so to speak, were with him often so that the President forgave occasional slips and mistakes being mindful of the larger accomplishments of his private secretary.

Altogether it was a remarkable association—an unusual blend of two types wholly different but working effectively in combination. The break between these two men really relates to the second administration of Mr. Wilson and will be reserved for a future chapter.

tine of life, from the pursuit of material things, pleasure, and whatnot, to the ages, and helps them to adjust life not in terms of today, but of eternity.

Men want friends. Nothing is more pitiful than a friendless man or woman. The minister has as his chief joy and duty the introducing of men to the greatest friend of all, Jesus Christ. Men want to know God. A great revival of interest in religion is now on. The world needs ministers who can make God real to men, who can give gripping reality and compelling power to the spiritual verities.

The ministry deals with the motives for our choices and actions. The condition of the world which has cast a shadow of pessimism over us, is due not to a lack of knowledge of what ought to be done. It is caused because men are too weak and vacillating to do the best they know. If men did the best they knew the ills of this world would be encouragingly improved. The minister brings men and women to Jesus Christ the great Friend, who is also "the power of God." When men know Him and keep close fellowship with Him, the power plant for victorious righteous living that lies dormant in every one, is set into effective motion. The world today is yearning for and reaching after high ideals. The minister has as his contribution and message the secret of the power to realize men's aspirations.

The "call to the ministry" is not something "magical or mysterious, but a divinely presented opportunity for rendering the highest possible human service." The ministry demands all there is of a man. It offers opportunity for every talent of the most able man. At the same time the man of more limited ability, finds that even more important that marked ability is whole hearted dedication to God.

There are great rewards for the minister. He has close fellowship with folks at their best and highest, as well as at their worst. The ability to speak the word of comfort and cheer and assurance in the name of Christ at the time of death or sickness brings real satisfaction. The ministry to sorrow, despair or discouragement is one of the joys of the ministry. One of the greatest rewards is the minister's opportunity to shape and mold the lives of the youth. In this way he influences most profoundly the years to come. He has the joy of knowing that his investment of himself is most enduring and worth while. He links men with Christ and the remaking power of God. He is helping build "that house not make with hands eternal in the heavens," which will be found standing amid "all the wrecks of time."

Cardinals Force the Giants Out of First

The St. Louis Cardinals have again come to life, illustrating to the East that its teams are not unbeatable. The Cards, although holding seventh position in the percentage column of the National League have won three consecutive games from the New York Giants and forced the Gotham team out of first place, which is today held by Cincinnati. Up to date the Cards have won eight and lost thirteen games.

In the American Association the Blues, winners of the flag last year, have dropped three games to Toledo on the Kansas City field. The Mud Hens, tailenders in the Association, have kept the Blues in second position by these defeats.

The weather report for tomorrow is fair, with all filling stations wide open, smiles the Ottawa, Kans., Herald.

Communication

I understand a serious automobile accident occurred Sunday, which was the direct result of an overloaded roadster, there being four or five young people in the one seated roadster.

This is a practice growing among young people that is becoming alarming.

It is not only an immodest practice by the way these young people are seated in these one seated automobiles, but it so crowds the car that it is physically impossible to properly man the automobile, not only greatly endangering their lives, but acts as a menace to the traveling public. One may drive ever so slow and cautious and when met by a car so crowded, and most invariably speeding, laughing and yelling, and not paying proper attention to the running of their automobile, is what scares careful drivers to death. You can't get away from them.

A Ford touring car was running over town Sunday with eight young people in it, and their actions should have been cause for arrest.

If there is not a law on the statute books to prevent overcrowding of automobiles on joy riders "not only from a moral standpoint" but "from a safety standpoint," there should be, and that as soon as such a law could be enacted.

Then enforce to the letter.

Safety First.

7B Baseball Team Wins From Picked Nine

The 7B nine won from a picked team of the other grades on the high school diamond yesterday afternoon. The final score was 7 to 6. The 7B team made two runs in the last inning. Clyde Nicholas and Fay Howard caught and pitched for the 7B team, and Cecil Mayes and Don Smith toiled for the combination team. Mr. Owl

A TIP FOR JOHNNY.

We were perched on a garden fence last night, when we heard Johnny B.'s mother say that she would like to own a vacuum cleaner for her rugs, but she needed the money for other things.

That set me to thinking. And here's my scheme:

Johnny should buy a vacuum cleaner (on credit if need be) and let his mother clean her rugs. He tracks in most of the dirt, anyhow!

Then tomorrow night he should run a Democrat-Forum Want Ad, offering to rent his cleaner, or better yet, to come around and clean rugs himself.

Soon the cleaner would be paid for and Johnny would have a regular income.

It's just like that—if the proper use is made of Democrat-Forum Want Ads.

"my Rheumatism is gone—"

"THERE are thousands of you men and women, just like I once was—slaves to rheumatism, muscle pains, joint pains, and horrible stiffness. I had the wrong idea about rheumatism for years. I didn't realize that increasing blood-cells had the effect of completely knocking out rheumatic impurities from the system. That is why I began using S. S. S.! Today I have the strength I used to have years ago! I don't use my crutches any more." S. S. S. makes people talk about themselves the way it builds up their strength. Start S. S. S. today for that rheumatism. You'll feel the difference shortly.

S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

ANNOUNCEMENT

To meet a certain and very pronounced demand -- one that appears to be increasing daily -- and also because we have been able to secure added space in which the re-selling part of the plan can be taken care of -- the Price Store will add a new feature to its business, to be known as --

The Exchange Department

The idea and the reason is this: There is hardly a home in Maryville or hereabouts where there is not at least one old piece of furniture that the owner would like to exchange for new, PROVIDING the old piece or pieces would be accepted as part payment on new furniture. Many would like to exchange an old sideboard for a modern buffet; some an old cupboard for a new kitchen cabinet; a couch for a late design davenport; an old-fashioned oak dining or bedroom suite for a modern walnut suite; a dining table for a new and larger one -- and so on.

Our Plan Is This - -

If you have anything at all (except springs, mattress or wood beds) that you would like to trade in as part payment on new furniture of any kind, come to our store and select whatever new article or articles you wish. If you find that we have just what you want, and our price is satisfactory to you, we will then send a man out to look at the piece or pieces you wish to trade in. He will tell you the exact amount we can allow for your used furniture, and if this amount is satisfactory to you, you can order him to send out the new article or articles you selected, and send back the old.

Understand, please, that we do not BUY used furniture, but only accept it as part payment on new, to be selected. Nor do we send out to make a price on old furniture unless you have already found something in new furniture in our store that pleases you.

Please Bear This In Mind - -

None of the used furniture, or floor coverings taken in by us will be placed on sale again on the floors where new stocks are sold. Instead, we have opened up a new space in our store, entirely separate and apart from our new stocks. In this space all used furniture which is taken in exchange, or as part payment for new goods, will be refinished and repaired when necessary, and offered for sale to people who will be glad of the opportunity to buy this kind of furniture at the prices it will be offered at. No used furniture, under any circumstances, ever did or ever will appear with new goods on the floors of the main store.

Here's the Opportunity, Then

You have possibly wanted some of the nice new and stylish furniture you have been admiring. You've been wanting to get rid of some of the old-fashioned pieces you have---possibly some of them not as comfortable as they might be. You have wanted to brighten up your home. Price's suggest the way. Don't -- you don't need to -- get along the rest of your life with furniture that does not please you. Let us know what you would like to get rid of and what you would like to have in new -- and we will not only do the rest, but do it in such satisfactory manner that you will become one of the Price store's hundreds of friends.

Our standing and reputation in this community is back of this new venture. Those who know us, and know of us, need no further assurance. Telephone for any further information you may be in need of.
